Vice President,
Human Resources

Liane J. George is the vice president of Human Resources for United Launch Alliance (ULA). In this role, George is responsible for directing all human resources functions including talent management, labor relations, security and emergency services, compensation and benefits, learning management, organizational development and HR operations.

George brings more than 25 years of experience leading human resources operations to ULA. She began her career with the General Motors Corporation in 1985 and has held numerous positions in both privately-held and publicly-traded, multibillion-dollar manufacturing, technology and service/solutions corporations.

Before joining ULA, George served as the corporate people officer for Sierra Nevada Corporation, directing the enterprise HR and corporate administration functions. She was also the lead member of the ethics committee, the HR lead for acquisitions and a key member of the corporate crisis management team.

George also served as the director of Human Resources for Lockheed Martin Corporation. She held multiple roles in both operating businesses and corporate headquarters. In one of her last roles, she lead the HR function for more than 1,000 employees located in the United States, United Kingdom, Singapore and Australia.

She received her Bachelor of Science degree in business administration from State University of New York at Oswego and her master's degree in human resources from the University of Pennsylvania. She also completed several leadership development programs including HR Leadership Programs at Lockheed Martin and the Corporate Executive Board.
